OF BUSINESS

Are you an IT Manager or IT Director who aspires to serve in the role of a Chief Information Officer some day in a medium size or large business setting? Or are you a CIO in search of personal growth to become a more effective leader?

Do you know what characteristics set CIOs apart from other business and IT leaders?

Would you like to know how the CIO role is evolving and how you can develop your skills to become a trusted business partner and guide in your organization?

At VIE, we define a CIO as someone who is highly accomplished in:

- Business and Financial Skills
- Leadership Skills
- Communications and Relationship Building Skills
- ... and of-course Technology Strategies

VIE's IT Leadership Academy

VIE is a group of ex-CIOs who are passionate about developing IT talent to serve business. Throughout our careers, we have coached IT people to be the best that they can be. Using our collective leadership experience of over 500 years, we have developed a curriculum for aspiring IT leaders. The list of skills includes:

How this course can help you

There are a number of valuable self-development opportunities available for aspiring IT leaders. They include the SIM local chapter events, the SIM RLF program and other general leadership coaching. None of these provides the specialized training needed to develop into a true CIO. VIE uses our extensive CIO leadership experience to provide a learning experience that is unmatched in the industry. We do this through half-day group meetings (mastermind style) that provide discussion and learning from the rest of the group as well from our expert CIOs.
